

FIRST-CLASS PREPARATION FOR THE INTERNATIONAL HR WORKPLACE

My experience in Edinburgh so far has proven that coming here to start an MSc in International Human Resource Management was one of the best choices in my life. The University of Edinburgh offers one of the best academic environments, renowned professors and lecturers, as well as a well-chosen multicultural student body. After nine years of working experience while completing a bachelor's degree in business psychology as a "distance learner", I wanted to know what it means to be a "real" student. This I have surely achieved!

The curriculum at UoE's Business School is interdisciplinary and demanding. Frequent guest lectures given by experienced CEOs and HR managers of well-known multinational enterprises, as well as an international field-trip in the second semester, offer students hands-on practical orientation. There are enormous additional resources available for students that I never would have expected, such as personal advice on improving academic performance, one-on-one coaching sessions, and personal development programmes. New friendships with fellow international students have helped me settle in, and the cultural differences around me are broadening my perspectives. Hence, it is the best preparation for working in the globalised HR business world.

Apart from the great reputation that the University has around the world, I was attracted to the global setting of Edinburgh and the traditional Scottish culture. Edinburgh is highly cosmopolitan and I really like the city's vibrant atmosphere. As soon as you leave the house, you encounter history and splendid architecture. And just a few kilometres away, there is plenty of nature to enjoy – with bagpipes always setting the pace.

Living in this great country by joining this prestigious University has been a once-in-a-lifetime experience, both academically and personally. I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the British Chamber of Commerce in Germany Foundation and everyone involved in the decision to grant me this support.

Nadine Hauptmeier, Dinslaken
(currently University of Edinburgh Business School)